Introduction

For many years it has been my desire to preserve the genealogy of my father's and mother's families. I am now in my 79th year and feel that I must do it very soon, if it is ever done. We have collected all the material we can find. Some writings of a historical nature, some records of family genealogy and some public records have helped us; also family records running back to about 1634 and down to 1912, whereby we have prepared this genealogy of the Brown and Comly families and their numerous branches of direct descendants.

It would be impossible to follow all the diverging families. We have tried to carefully keep the line of descent clearly in view. In this work we solicited the help of many of our relatives herein mentioned; and my brother, N. C. Brown, Sr., at my request, has taken charge of the work to see that it is finished. He has done the work for me. Others who have helped are: Ethelbert Callahan, Robinson, Ill.; Col. Henry Glaze, San Francisco, Cal.; Capt. Nicholas Glaze, Los Angeles, Cal.; Beza-leel Holmes, Terre Haute, Ind.; David S. Green, Denver, Colorado; Rev. L. W. Wilkin, Noble, Illinois; Mrs. Sarah J. Coleman, Columbus, Ohio; Miss Sadie L. West, Columbus, Ohio; Mr. Fred Green, Dayton, Ill.; Smith M. Comly, Columbus, Ohio; Mrs. George N. Brown, M. D., Hebron, Ohio; Mrs. Elizabeth Callahan, Heart Neoga, Ill.; Hon. O. L. Brown, Terre Haute, Ind.; Mrs. D. P. Clark, Allerton, Ill.; Miss Eva B. Snyder, Robinson, Ill.; Eli B. Comly, Logan, Ohio; Miss Lola Myers, McLouth, Kan.; Hon. Robert S. Comly, Oblong, Ill.; Capt. James F. Comly, New Lexington, Ohio; Clara Holmes Green, Vicksburg, Miss.; Mrs. Caroline, G. McConnell, Columbus, Ohio; Miss Elizabeth H. Richards, New Lexington, Ohio; Mrs. Lucy A. Hale, Granite City, Ill.; Mrs. Kate C. Oaks, Decatur, Ill.; W.

H. Muzzy, Decatur, Ill.; Mrs. Margaret C. Cochran, Indianapolis, Ind.; Mrs. Callie Wilkin Jones, Granville, Ohio; Mrs. Sarah C. Wood, Johnstown, Ohio; Capt. Jas. M. Holmes, Washington, D. C.; Mrs. Jas. A. Huston, Sewickley, Penn.; Mrs. Talma Comly Wilson, Somerset, Ohio; Mrs. Sophronia Carter Brooks, Alexandria, Ohio.

To these relatives we owe much in this work and would have failed without their aid. They are entitled to unlimited praise for the prompt and enthusiastic manner in which they have responded to our call for help. We know that they will have a better knowledge as to who their ancestors were, what manner of men and women lived before them and to whom they can refer with pride. Many of them have served their day and generation at the front in everything intellectual and patriotic.

Thanking you all again for your help, I am very sincerely yours for the benefit of our posterity and the pleasure of living.

THE AUTHOR.

The Brown Family

Our grandfather, Nicholas Brown, born Oct. 17th, 1765, stated to us that the first of his ancestors came to America with the Lord Baltimore colony about 1634, or soon thereafter. He stated that two brothers, William and Edward, were the first of the Browns, but we have no record of the names of their children or whom they married; but know that they were prolific and did their share in the increase of the population, and we know that many families were added to their posterity, who settled in various parts of the then new world. New England States furnished the family names. The same were found all along the Atlantic coast and at the present time they are found in any state of our great country. Some are known to be in Canada and in Mexico. The first one of the Browns that we have definite records for was one George Brown and his brother Edward Brown, who were located near Baltimore, Maryland. George was our ancestor; as to when he was born we have no record, but it was about the year 1730. He married a Miss Nancy Stevenson, resident of Baltimore, Maryland. Said Nancy Stevenson was a sister of one Colonel Stevenson of that city. To this union were given sixteen children as follows: Edward, born March 16th, 1734; Richard, born ———, 1740. Others of the family were: William, Henry, Hugh, George, Joshua, James, Nancy, Rainor, Mary, Sarah, Elizabeth and Caleb. There were two others whose names are not known. We have a definite account of but three of this family.

Of Edward, Col. Richard and Nancy of the other children we have nothing definite.

Edward Brown, son of George and Nancy Stevenson Brown, married Margaret Durbin and lived in Frederick County, Maryland. She was a relative of one of the family of Durbins, who resided in Baltimore, Md. Rev. John P. Durbin was of this family. To this union were given the following children: Joshua, Caleb, Nicholas, John, Hugh, Ruth, Ann, Jane, Sarah, Margaret and Mary.

Edward Brown, son of George Brown, was named in honor of his uncle, Edward, about whom we have no definite information. He was captam and owner of a ship plying his vocation wherever business called; it is claimed by Miss M. J. Roe's history of Wells, Holmes and Brown families that he is thought or believed to have abandoned seafaring life and to have settled farther South on the Atlantic coast. Nicholas Brown, who endowed Brown University, of Providence, Rhode Island, was said to be his grandson. The Brown family of the State of Georgia are believed to be of his family, as the family names of men and women are the same as of the George Brown families and a striking resemblance as of brothers often appears.

It matters not about these relations, we only call attention to those facts which lead us to believe them of the same old English origin. They were all High Church Episcopalians in religion, and many of them still cleave to the Episcopal church.

Edward Brown lived in Frederick County, Md., many years, until after the beginning of the war of Revolution. We know that his sons, Joshua and Nicholas, served as captain and lieutenant in the Pennsylvania line. As to Caleb we have no record proof of his service, he is reported to have served in the Maryland troops as a captain of mounted rifles; he was known to be fearless and looking for trouble during said war of the Revolution. Circumstances prove Edward Brown to have been a farmer and owner of grist mill and distillery. He was an earnest Episcopalian and a patriot. It is evident that he moved to Berks County, Penn., then to Cumberland County, and after close of war to Burgetstown in Washington County, Penn., in 1785; from there to Holliday's Cove in Brook County, West Va. Then about the year 1795 he moved to Madison County, Ky., where he remained till his death, Aug. 14, 1823. His first wife died at Holliday's Cove, W. Va., March 20th, 1795. He married for his second wife the widow of Major Haughey. There were no children by this marriage; he was 89 years old at the time of his death.

Joshua Brown, son of Edward and Margaret Durbin Brown, was born about the year 1757. He spent his childhood in Frederick County, Md. We find that in the years 1780-2 he was captain of a company in the 8th battalion of Cumberland County, militia, of which Alexander Brown was the colonel. (See page 562, volume six, Penn. Archives, 5th series.) He married a Miss Durbin and migrated to Madison County, Ky., and died there. Descendants of his family are living at Gonzales, Texas.

Caleb Brown, son of Edward and Margaret Durbin Brown, was born in Frederick County, Md., March 23, 1759. He married Jemima Stevenson, a daughter of Col. Henry Stevenson, Aug. 24, 1786. Jemima was born in Maryland, Jan. 17, 1761, and died in Kentucky, Aug. 14th, 1807. Caleb married Elizabeth Hardister, his second wife, Nov. 15th, 1809, and died in Kentucky, July 30, 1837, aged 78 years. He had ten children by his first wife and three by his last wife. His son, Nicholas, was killed in the battle of Fort Meigs in Dudley's defeat, May 5th, 1813. Other members of this family settled in many different places in the South, and were named Henry, Edward, Stevenson, John, Joshua, Francis, Hugh, Caleb, Jr., Jemima, Malvina and Nicholas the second, who lives near Stockton, Cal. We know nothing definite of their locations.

Hugh Brown, son of Edward and Margaret Durbin Brown, married a Miss Hay for his first wife, his second wife was a Miss Sapington. He came from Kentucky to Ohio about 1820, and lived near Kirkersville, Licking County, Ohio, until the year 1838. He then moved to Iowa, and died in 1843. He had a large family, among which was one that stuttered so awfully that it was said it would cure dyspepsia or rheumatism to see and hear him talk. We have no knowledge of the family at this time.

Ruth Brown, daughter of Edward and Margaret Durbin

Brown, married James Maguire, and their descendants are located in West Virginia.

Ann Brown, daughter of Edward and Margaret Durbin Brown, married William Jessup. She lived in Baltimore, Md., and died Sept. 9, 1802. She left six children, William, Dominic, Joshua, Charles, Arietta and Ann, whose descendants are numerous. William died in the year 1850. Dominic lived near Reisterstown, Md. Arietta married George Ward. Their children are eminent in business and professions in old Baltimore, Md. Ann married Capt. Nathaniel Childs in 1803, and in 1810 they moved to St. Louis, Mo., where he died. They have eight living children at the last report: Rev. Nathaniel, Jr., Dominic, Rebecca, Sewel, Joshua, (a merchant); William, Catherine, who married a Mr. Reeves of Cincinnati, Ohio, Caleb B., and Charles J. Childs, M. D., of St. Louis, Mo.

John Brown, son of Edward and Margaret Durbin Brown, married and raised a family of six children, one of whom was named Joseph. They moved to Texas, where he died about 1800.

Jane Brown, daughter of Edward and Margaret Durbin Brown, married Richard Wells, and died in 1832. They have many descendants in Illinois and Missouri; nothing further is known.

Sarah Brown, daughter of Edward and Margaret Durbin Brown, married Solomon Porter, and raised a family. Nothing further known.

Margaret Brown, daughter of Edward and Margaret Durbin Brown, married James Sapington of Kentucky. She moved to Missouri and died without children in 1849.

Mary Brown, daughter of Edward and Margaret Durbin Brown, married John Harryman in Kentucky. She moved to Missouri and died in 1849. No further facts known to us.

Nicholas Brown, son of Edward and Margaret Durbin Brown, came into this world on the 17th day of October 1765, in Frederick County, Maryland. His boyhood days were spent on his father's farm and in the grist mill and still house. It appears that everybody in those early days believed in spirits of various kinds. He was educated in the select schools of that day, was bright and active both in mind and body, and was considered a good scholar for that day and generation. In his early boyhood he was selected as clerk of the Episcopal church and performed said duties in a very satisfactory manner. He soon learned much of the liturgy by heart and in his old age would repeat it to his friends and grandchildren, and would repeat the prayers eloquently; was a fine vocalist and often led in church music. The silver sleeve buttons he used in his surplice are now owned and highly valued by his great-grandson, Nicholas C. Brown, of Union Station, Licking County Ohio. He was blind from cataract of eyes for several years prior to his death.

Some time soon after he was out of school, and when a mere lad, he enlisted in the army; was ensign of Capt. Heister's Company of a Berks County, Penn. batallion. See Page 295, Vol. 5, of the Pennsylvania Archives, 5th series. I was his companion or body servant for several years just prior to his death, walked with him often to visit a neighbor or to drive the buggy for him to more remote places. To enliven and pass away the hours of blindness, his mind would revert to the times of his young manhood. He would sing the rude war songs of the revolution, tell of marches and hardships endured, of the sacrifices of the patriots for liberty, etc. He told of the French and German soldiers and of Washington's fame with his soldiers; also about the surrender of Lord Cornwallis at Yorktown. When narrating that event he would often say, "It was a proud day for our George." Some time after the close of the war he was with his father's family at Burgetstown, Penn., where he married a wife.

Nicholas Brown and Sarah Whitaker were married at Burgetstown, Washington County, Penn., in 1792. Sarah Whitaker was born April 12, 1769, near Hagerstown, Md., but spent her young lady days at Burgetstown, Penn. She lived to be old, dying January 4, 1859, at her daughter's home near Kirkersville, Licking County, Ohio. She was buried by the side of her husband who preceded her to the heavenly home on June 29th, 1858, departing this life at his son, Asa Brown's home, near Kirkersville, Ohio. Their mortal remains lie in Fletcher Chapel yard south of Kirkersville about three miles.

Soon after their marriage they moved with his father's family to Holiday Cove, Brook County, West Va., remained there about two years, then moved to Madison County, Ky., about midway between Richmond and Lexington, where they owned a farm, grist mill, saw mill and distillery. They were prosperous and remained there until 1813, when he moved to Fairfield County, Ohio, Walnut township on the south bank of Buckeye Lake. In 1814 they moved to Harrison township, Licking County, on a farm two miles south of Kirkersville, where he cleared a farm from a dense forest.

The unrest of the pioneer was ever present with him. He sold this farm and for a short time owned one near Baltimore, Fairfield County, Ohio. A little later on he sold and bought one north of Lancaster, Fairfield County Ohio. He was then an old man and lived with his son, Edward, but was full of the spirit of adventure and had traveled over the western part of Ohio and Southern Indiana. He had crossed Illinois, and roamed over a good part of Missouri, returned to his home saying, Ohio was good enough for him. At a corn husking on his farm near Baltimore, when the corn was done and supper had been served and the boys and girls were having a lively time playing games and doing various stunts, he was called on, old as he was, for a stunt. He stepped forward, hopped up and cracked his heels together three times before hitting the floor and invited anyone who wished, to do as well. No one did that stunt but Uncle Nick, as he was called by his friends. He could stand by the side of any ordinary horse and leap astride him as easily as a young man at 21, when he was near ninety years young.

His children had long since married and had families of their own with grown up children. All of them had moved on west to Crawford and Cumberland Counties, Ill., some to Iowa, except two, Asa Brown and Eli Holmes, who remained near Kirkersville, Ohio. He went west to live with those in Illinois, but after a few years tired of the west. His eye-sight was failing and they returned to the association of their old neighbors about Kirkersville. They visited a few weeks at a time with Asa and Eli until life was done. To this union were given the following children: Basil, April 28th, 1793; Thomas, May 21st, 1795; Naney, July 16th, 1797; Catherine, Jan. 3rd, 1799;

Asa, June 4th, 1801; Betsy, July 20th, 1803; Rezin, June 16th, 1805; Peggy, August 30th, 1808; Edward, Sept. 29th, 1811 and Sally, April 11th, 1814.

All of these children but three lived to raise large families which are now scattered from the Panama Canal to the Arctic Circle, and from ocean to ocean. Most of them are members of the M. E. church and Republican in politics.

BAZZEL BROWN

Family History of Bazzel Brown (1792-1854), Son of Nicholas and Sarah Brown.

Like the unfolding of the doors of the vast corridor of time, the opening of the portals of the eternal past, the reading of the acts and deeds of our fore-fathers with the remote dates of their births, marriages, achievements and deaths take us back to that dim past and bring us face to face with those to whom we owe our existence, but of whom we know so little and have long since lost awhile. And when we think how near and dear they were to those we love, and that we, though generations removed, are but links in the continuous chain, a veritable part of them, we then realize they are all near and dear to us. We also realize that we, too, will soon be linked with that dim and hazy past and be only a memory, with dates of birth, marriage and death and whatever achievement we have been fortunate enough to have attained, and that our future generations will then look back upon us as we on ours, with either gratitude or indifference according as our lives shall merit.

But what, after all, constitutes achievement such as will affect posterity? It is not professional nor financial success alone; for the former dies with us and the latter is unstable and uncertain of duration. It is not political preferment nor local fame, for that cannot be transmitted to posterity. It is only that inborn character of true manhood and womanhood, the love of truth and right, the priceless boon of love that makes our lives worth the living and makes the world better because we have lived. Better to be mourned as good, faithful and honest, a sympathizer with the distressed, an aid to the afflicted, a champion to the down-trodden than as the rich, powerful profligate, who was indifferent to mankind.

Bazzel Brown, the subject of this sketch, the oldest son of Nicholas Brown, (1765-1858), and Sarah Brown, (1772-1859), was born April 28, 1793, in Burgetstown, Pennsylvania, and died May 20, 1854. He was of medium build, but strong. He was a farmer and lumberman, Baptist preacher and school teacher. On January 9, 1817, he married Abigail Turner, who was born March 23, 1800, and died March 9, 1878, and they migrated to Boone County, Missouri, where five of their children were born. They then moved to Licking County, Ohio, and afterward to Cumberland County, Illinois, where, in the little Salem cemetery, (near Jewett, Ill.) they both lie buried.

To this union were born the following children: Nicholas T., James Sutton, Sidna, Asa W., Edward, Sally, Jesse, Bazil, Joseph, Rezin, Thomas, Jamima A., and Elizabeth.

Nicholas T. Brown, the oldest child was born in Missouri, (Boone Co.) January 6, 1820, and moved with his father and mother to Ohio, afterward going to Illinois, March 25, 1841. He married Elizabeth Gibboney, and to them were born the following children, viz: Bazil, Margaret, John, George, William, Asa, Oscar and Joseph. All are living in Iowa and California, except Asa, who died in Indiana, (Vigo County), leaving a large family. Nicholas T. Brown died at the early age of forty-six years, (April 1, 1866), in the Senate Chamber of Iowa, while serving his district as Senator, and is buried at Des Moines, Iowa.

James Sutton Brown, second child of Bazzel and Abigail Brown, was born April 6, 1822, in Boone Co., Missouri, and moved with his parents to Licking County, Ohio, thence to Illinois, and in March 1856, to Vigo County, Indiana. Brown, Dec. 20, 1865; Hannah Abigail Brown, May 25, 1867; Sarah E. Brown, April 30, 1869; Nicholas T. Brown, March 8, 1871, (died in infancy), and Tighlman G. Brown, Dec. 18, 1872.

Sally Brown, sixth child, was born May 18, 1832. She married James M. Ferguson, March 14, 1852, and to them were born four children: Benjamin, farmer, living at Neoga, Ill.; Sherman, a prominent minister of the United Brethren church; Lucy, who married a Mr. Roberts, and lives at Neoga, Ill., and Abigail Edna, who married James Butler and lives at Toledo, Illinois.

Bazil Brown, the eighth child, was born Nov. 26, 1835, in Licking County, Ohio. During his early life he taught school and farmed, and later engaged in the lumber and timber business on a large scale. He furnished a large percent of the necessary ties and piling for the construction of the Vandalia Railroad west of Terre Haute, Ind., living at that time and for a long time prior thereto at Jewett, Ill., coming there from his Ohio home at an early age. He was elected and served a number of years as a Justice of the Peace in Illinois, during the construction of the railroad through that section and had a varied experience during that unsettled period. In 1891 he moved with his family to Terre Haute, Indiana, where he was again elected Justice, serving in that capacity for a period of sixteen years. He was later admitted to the bar, and is now engaged in the practice of the law in partnership with his son.

Orin L. Brown, under the firm name of Brown and Brown at Terre Haute.

On October 6, 1859, he was married to Laura A. Farmer, (born Feb. 22, 1840,) and although they are both past three score and ten, and celebrated their golden wedding anniversary more than two years ago, they are lovers still.

To them were born the following children: Almira, born Oct. 13, 1860, died April 18, 1895. She was married to Dr. J. W. Rawlins, and left surviving her, Elsie Catherine, wife of Theodore Kearney, Scott B. and L. Fausta. Allie is buried at Greenup, Ill., beside her husband.

Joseph Brown was born Dec. 21, 1837, and was drowned Aug. 21, 1840, while out with little playmates too small to rescue him. Of all the vicissitudes of her long life, this tragedy was perhaps the most sorrowful and lasting of any of the misfortunes that befell the dear mother of this family. The little fellow was buried near his home in Kirkersville cemetery, Licking County, Ohio.

Rezin Brown was born Aug. 25, 1840, in Licking County, Ohio. He died Feb. 17, 1842, and is buried in the family burying ground there.

Jamima Rebecca Brown, born Jan. 12, 1844, and Phillip Benjamin Ferguson were married May 17, 1863, and to them were born James, Abigail, (who married a Mr. Roberts,) Lucy, who married a Mr. Poe, and Bertha, who married a Kingery. All are living near Jewett, Illinois. Aunt "Mima" is still living, 1912, but has long been a widow.

Elizabeth Brown, born Aug. 18, 1846, died May 30, 1903, and James Berry were married March 4, 1866, and to them were born John, Bazzel, Elizabeth, Edward, Anna, Dottie, Millie and Margaret. All are dead except Anna and Elizabeth, who with their husbands live in Mattoon, Illinois. Aunt Betty lies buried in Berry Cemetery near Toledo, Ill., having died May 30, 1903.

As a passing tribute to the memory of all our dear ones now gone, I desire to say that no gentler, kindlier, purer and affectionate women have ever lived; no more honorable, upright, temperate, braver nor manlier men have faced life's battles; and no higher tribute for pure, loving, trust and sweet gentle faith to her who was the mother of this entire progeny could be paid than to say that the moment of death found the aged features wreathed in smiles and gentle nature left its imprint indelibly stamped upon the rigid features forever.

CATHERINE BROWN HOLMES

Family Record of Eli and Catherine Brown Holmes

(By Callie Wilkin Jones.)

Eli Holmes, Sr., was born March 1, 1795, in Washington County, Penn., and emigrated with his father's family to Fairfield County, Ohio, when about ten years of age. He was the tenth child of a family of fifteen. His parents were James Holmes, Sr., and Nancy Ann Whitaker Holmes. The said James Holmes, Sr., assisted in establishing American Independence during the war of the Revolution. He enlisted from Bedford County, Penn., April 15, 1776, and resigned Dec. 31, 1776, being incapacitated from further service because of a gunshot wound through the hips, which made him a cripple for life.

He was third Lieutenant in 1st Battalion of Miles, Pa., Rifle Regt. of Capt. Richard Brown's Company. The remains of this Revolutionary soldier and his wife lie in what is known as George Wells grave-yard, one-half mile north of the national road, about half way between Kirkersville and Hebron in Licking County, Ohio.

The inscriptions on the stones lying upon the graves of James Holmes and Nancy Ann Whitaker Holmes, are:

"Here lie the remains of James Holmes, who died Feb. the 2nd, A. D. 1823, aged 75 years. He after serving his country in the Revolutionary war, raised 13 sons and one daughter who survive him. Early in life he embraced Christianity and died in the faith. An honest man is the noblest work of God."

On hers the following:

"Here lie the remains of Ann Holmes, relict of James Holmes, who died Sept. 12, A. D. 1829, aged 69 years. As a wife she was devoted and faithful, as a mother, tender and affectionate, as a neighbor, kind and benevolent, as a Christian, meek, pious and sincere."

Catherine (Caty) Brown was born in Kentucky, Jan. 3rd, 1799, and came with her father's family to Ohio in her childhood. The writer has heard her tell, how one day as she was out in the yard taking care of a younger brother, a handsome young lad came riding up, and it proved to be her cousin, Eli Holmes, and she at once fell in love with him, and it proved to be love at first sight with both parties, which culminated in their marriage Nov. 13, 1817, by John McMahon. Many can vouch for the fact that they remained faithful lovers "until death did them part," and we have no doubt they are as united lovers in the better land. They were members of the Methodist Episcopal church, Catherine being a member from childhood, and Eli was led to the altar to join church by his oldest daughter, Sarah, at a meeting in his own barn. He was a very enthusiastic Christian and at times so happy that he would almost shout. He attended protracted meetings far and near, and at one time when he wanted to go to one of these meetings, he found himself without trousers suitable to wear, so he asked Caty to make him some. The only kind of goods she had was a piece of red woolen, out of which the trousers were made, and Eli wore them to the meeting. Catherine was not so demonstrative, but no less sincere a Christian, she was quite a seamstress and was said to have cleared more of the timber off their farm with her needle, (by making clothing for the workmen), than did her husband with his ax.

The clearing of the quarter section they moved upon when first married, was an enormous task, the timber being so dense, that it is said, one could have walked on logs without stepping on the ground, all over the quarter section.

After a few years, the first log cabin built, had to be replaced by a larger one to accommodate the increasing family, and later as the children grew to manhood and womanhood, the log cabin gave place to a frame house, painted white with green shutters. This house still stands and is fairly well preserved. When this family of children were all married, the farm was sold and Eli and Catherine Holmes went to live at Zanesville, Ohio, their youngest son, James M., and family living with them in their old age. On June 29, 1869, Eli Holmes, Sr., went to his reward after a short illness. Catherine then made her home with her children, spending a short time at each place. On March 29, 1876, after a few days' sickness, she "fell asleep" at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Nancy Wilkin, near Granville, Ohio. The bodies of the two lovers lie side by side in the beautiful Woodlawn cemetery at Zanesville, Ohio.

have been married nearly sixty-three years, and so far as we know, they are the oldest couple in the relationship. They have lived pure and upright lives, were strictly honest, and no task was too hard, when their children were to derive some good therefrom. Being deprived of educational advantages, made them more anxious that their children should have what they greatly missed. They joined the Methodist Episcopal church at Fletcher Chapel when quite young, and always afterward attended the services when their strength would allow. They are farmers and Republicans.

Amanda Wilkin, second daughter of Enos and Nancy Holmes Wilkin, was born March 15, 1853, near Kirkersville, Ohio. Windsor, and has ever since been a member of this church, and a zealous worker in the Sunday school and Missionary societies. On Dec. 4, 1879, she was married to Henry Judson Carter by Rev. Orville J. Nave. She united with the Methodist Episcopal church in Granville, Ohio, under the pastorate of Rev. Jamison. Her religious life was quiet and unpretending. Only those who were near her knew of the many kind acts performed for the comfort of others. Her testimonies during her last illness expressed an unfaltering faith in Christ as her personal Savior. On June 11, 1897, she "fell asleep," and the body rests in the beautiful Maple Grove cemetery at Granville, Ohio.

OUR SOLDIER BOYS.

Two sons of Eli and Catherine Holmes were in the war of the Rebellion, the oldest son and the youngest. Nicholas Holmes enlisted as a private in Co. C., 46th Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, Sept. 21, 1861, and was transferred to Company L, same Regiment, about February, 1862, and served faithfully until February 1863, at which time on account of disabilities contracted while in line of duty, he was honorably discharged. These disabilities were the cause of his death in after years. He was in the battle of Shiloh and in the siege of Corinth, Mississippi, in the spring of 1862.

James Monroe Holmes enlisted as member of Company B., 135th Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, May 2nd, 1864, at Camp Chase, Ohio. He served under Captain U. S. Westbrook and Colonel A. Legg, guarding the B. & O. Railroad from May 13 to July 3, 1864, was taken prisoner at North Mountain, Va., July 3, 1864, was in prison at Lynchburg, Va., from July 11 to 19, at Andersonville, Ga., from July 27 to Sept. 30, at Savannah, Ga., from Oct. 1 to 14, and at Milan, Ga., from Oct. 15 to Nov. 22, 1864, when he was removed to Savannah, Ga., and was paroled Nov. 25, 1864. On the 26th he was delivered to the Union fleet off Fort Pulaski, Ga., a mere skeleton from starvation and inhuman treatment. He arrived at the U. S. Hospital, Annapolis, Md., Dec. 1, furloughed home Dec. 17, 1864, and mustered out Jan. 19, 1865, at Columbus, Ohio. In company with James Monroe Holmes, was his cousin, Nicholas C. Brown, Sr., and Thomas E. Hayes. These three kept together throughout the terrible suffering they experienced in Andersonville prison, and "the ties of friendship formed in mutual adversity strengthen with the setting sun of life."

James Augustus Holmes, eldest son of Nicholas Holmes, was in the Civil War. He enlisted in Company C., 46th Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, Sept. 18, 1861, and was transferred in Feb. 1862 to Company L, same regiment for the purpose of making the full number of ten companies for the regiment. He was in Shiloh and all the engagements of the regiment until the close of the war, except the advance on, and siege of Corinth, being in the general hospital at Louisville, Ky., sick at the time. He was sent to the barracks by the doctor in charge of the hospital to be put in the invalid corps, but he deserted from the barracks the next day, and in spite of the vigilance of the guards, went aboard a boat and went down the Ohio river to Paducah, Ky., and then up the Tennessee river to Humbolt Landing, Tenn., and from there to Corinth, where he reported to the Provost Marshal, who told him his regiment was probably at La Grange, Tenn., or on its way there, and gave him permission to jump a train that was going there. When he arrived there he found Companies E. and G. there, but not his own, they not yet having arrived. He reported to Captain Pinney of Company E., and explained how he came to be there, and the captain invited him to remain with his company until the rest arrived, when he reported the circumstances to the colonel, who told him he would fix his case all right if anything was done about his leaving the barracks, and to report to his company for duty by a peremptory order of the colonel. He was promoted to corporal, July 5, 1862, but refused any further promotions during the service. He has the distinction of being the only soldier in the service who had the honor of commanding a brigade while holding the rank of corporal, there being one full Colonel, two or three (Lieutenant) Colonels and two or three Majors in the brigade at the time. He commanded the Second Brigade, First Division, 15th Army Corps, by order of Brigadier General R. F. Catterson and had full command from twelve o'clock at noon until 8:30 p. m., during the absence of General Catterson and his staff.

The number of engagements of this Regiment was thirty-two (32), according to General John A. Logan's statement. This Regiment was in Vicksburg campaign and the second siege of Jackson, Mississippi, then back to Chattanooga and Knoxville Relief, back to Scottsboro, Ala., where the said James A. Holmes re-enlisted as a veteran and went through the Atlanta campaign and then on the March to the Sea and through to Washington, D. C., and Grand Review, then to Louisville, Ky., where he was mustered out July 22, 1865, then to Camp Chase, Ohio, where he was finally discharged July 27, 1865. James A. Holmes joined the Grand Army of the Republic, June 3rd, 1866, at Newark, Ohio. He was the first Adjutant of Post No.

3, under the old organization of the G. A. R., and has been a member ever since, but of different posts from the old organization; also from the new. He was charter member of four different posts since he first joined at Newark, Ohio. He was charter member of Venum Post, No. 174 of Milford, Ill.; also Post Commander of said post. He is at the present time a member of Butler Post, No. 98, or the new name of Pueblo Post, No. 8, the Butler and Upton Posts having consolidated. He was a charter member of both the Butler and Pueblo Posts and carried the flag for the post for 18 or 20 years.

Family Record of Asa and Hannah Comly-Brown.

Asa Brown, son of Nicholas and Sarah Whitaker Brown, was born June 4, 1801, in Madison County, Ky. He passed from time to eternity July 26, 1883.

Hannah Comly, daughter of James and Catherine Whitaker Comly, was born May 18, 1806, in Jefferson County, Ohio, and departed this life September 10, 1876. Asa Brown and Hannah Comly were married at New Lexington, Perry County, Ohio, December 13, 1827. The subjects of this brief sketch were born on the frontier and were not favored with free school privileges. They were self-educated, and as they grew to mature years were able to fill their places in life in a very creditable manner. Asa Brown became a school teacher and taught for many years in winter seasons. He worked on his farm in warm weather and by dint of industry and rigid economy, became a prosperous farmer with the comforts of life sufficient for happiness and comfort. He was a devout Christian and an able speaker on religious subjects. He was licensed by the Methodist Episcopal church to speak in public as an exhorter, and was a class leader and steward of the church. His wife was a help mate in all life's duties and never failed to give her influence for good. She was of Quaker family and believed their doctrines, but joined heartily in every good work and often visited the sick and dying, giving good counsel and words of comfort. Their home was always open to those who needed shelter and sometimes the children slept on the floor because the beds were filled with older people. Quarterly meetings always meant a full house at Asa Brown's. The first year of their married life they lived two miles south of Kirkersville, Licking County, Ohio. Then they moved to a farm south of

ASA BROWN

New Lexington, Perry County, Ohio, where they resided until the year 1832. During this time he was employed on the Ohio Canal as a foreman at Gnadenhutten in Tuscarawas County, Ohio. He also taught school. In 1832 they moved to Union township, Licking County, Ohio, where he cleared and improved a large farm, and by dint of rigid economy, raised a large family, giving them a good education in the common schools and then sending them to the Ohio Wesleyan University at Delaware, Ohio, to finish their education.

I should fail to be just to those two old people, if I did not say their lives were devoted to doing good to their fellow beings. A more devoted Christian would be hard to find; morning and evening they knelt at the family altar and offered up their devotions to the ever-living God and never partook of refreshments without returning thanks. They were honest Christians against whom no truthful person has a word of censure, and when they came to the end of their life, only the mortal body simply died, for their souls shall never die. They passed through the Invisible and were changed to immortal and heavenly beings. Their lives live after them and cast a hallowed influence on all of us who knew them. Asa Brown was in his 83rd year, and Hannah was in her 71st year when called from labor to eternal rest. Their mortal remains lie side by side in the cemetery at Kirkersville, Licking County, Ohio. To them were given ten children, five of whom lived to maturity: James C., Joshua M., Eliza E., Sarah C. and Nicholas C. Brown.

George Callahan was born in the State of Maryland on the 27th day of December, 1765, and was married to Mary Wells at Uniontown, Pa., in the year 1792. He was a soldier in the war of the Revolution. After the war he became a Methodist preacher, and while traveling the Ohio circuit in Virginia, crossed the river and in September, 1787, at Fort Carpenter, preached the first sermon preached by any Methodist in the

REV. JOHN CALLAHAN

Northwestern Territory. In a contribution to the Western Historical Society in 1839, he gives the incident in the following words:

“A number of families, called squatters, had settled over the Ohio river in what was called Indian territory, and for protection had built a block house on the bank of the river which was then known by the name of Carpenter’s Station. The frontier had been for some time without alarm. In 1787 the Indians paid them a visit and killed part of the family of a Mr. McCoy. Some of the family fled to the Block House where all of the families were collected for safety. In about four days after, one of the circuit preachers (himself) preached at the house of Reason Pumphrey in Beach Bottom, about a mile and a half from the above named station. Eight or ten persons from the station attended the meeting. After the service was ended these persons in a very pressing manner solicited the young man to come that afternoon and preach for them at the Station. A council was held on the subject, and it was deemed by the majority unsafe to go. The preacher said: ‘Return and make such arrangements as you can, and if Providence permits I will visit you at four o’clock.’ A number were already collected, and some of the forenoon congregation were also in attendance. The chapel was a ball alley, and the walls were composed of fifteen or twenty hardy backwoodsmen, armed with rifles, tomahawks and scalping knives, who surrounded the assembly as protectors. After the service was ended a pressing invitation was given to visit them again, with which he cheerfully complied during his stay, which was about four months. A number of persons applied for admission into the society across the river. This, so far as I know, may be regarded as the first introduction of Methodism into the Indian country, now the flourishing State of Ohio.”

In the year 1809 he moved to Licking County, Ohio, and died January 25, 1839. To the end of life he was an active and efficient local preacher of the M. E. church.

DESCENDANTS OF NICHOLAS BROWN AND SARAH WHITAKER BROWN.

Sally Brown was born April 11, 1814, in Licking County, Ohio. She married Rev. John Glaze, who was born in Licking County, Ohio. He was a traveling minister of the M. E. church and attached to the Southern Illinois Conference. In the year 1830 they were married, and to this union were born 10 children, all of whom lived to old age.

The parents of those ten families are among the pioneers of the great west. John and Sally Glaze gave their lives to the cause of Christianity and raised their 10 children on the meager income of a circuit preacher, and their descendants are proud of their record.

This family record was furnished by Nicholas Glaze, of Los Angeles, Cal.

Colonel Henry Glaze, son of Rev. John and Sally Glaze, was born in Licking County, Ohio, March 1, 1837, the family moving to Crawford County, Illinois, in 1847. Until his arrival at early manhood he remained on the farm. His education was acquired by alternately teaching school and attending college at Lebanon, Illinois. He was licensed to preach in 1854, and joined the Southern Illinois Conference of the M. E. church. At the end of his first year in the ministry he was sent to the Blairsville circuit in the southern part of the state.

The following sketch of his experience during and since the Civil War is from his own pen:

"I was one of the 26 men who voted for Abraham Lincoln in 1860, out of the 2364 votes that were cast in my county.

COL. HENRY GLAZE
At the age of 24

Many of the Southern states seceded from the Union soon after Lincoln's election, and as nearly all the citizens of our county were from the Southern states, the sympathies of the people were with the South. I lived three miles from Marion, the county seat, and we were 18 miles from the railroad. Our mail was tri-weekly, and was brought from the railroad by stage. I was at the postoffice the day the news came of the attack on Fort Sumter. The district judge got the dispatch and read it to the crowd. The prosecuting attorney turned to me and said: 'You Republican S. of a B.' My reply was to knock him down. The judge interfered and stopped the row. I went home and a few hours after a note was brought to me telling me that the war had started, and as the sentiment was all against me, that I must leave and that I would have three days to get away. I sent a note back that I was an American citizen and had a right to live in that part of the United States. My father was on a circuit, 130 miles north. I wrote to him and told him I would either have to run or fight; that I had nothing to fight with. He sent me a Colt's revolver and told me to stay. I tried to get my wife to take the baby and go back home. She approved my staying, but said she would stay with me. From that time until September, when my year was out, I met mobs at every appointment, and every time I went to town. One Sunday I was mobbed three times. At one place the house was filled with men, not one woman being there. I took my revolver in my hand and went into the pulpit. I commenced to preach and told them that the present rebellion had a parallel in the rebellion in heaven, when the devil revolted against the authority of God; but as the devil and his hosts were overthrown and cast into hell, so Jeff Davis and his followers would be. The whole crowd rushed out of doors and went across the road to my horse. I went to the door and told them they were a set of cowards, that I was going straight to my horse, and if any of them remained before me until I got within three feet, I would shoot. I went straight to my horse, with my pistol in my hand, and was not prevented. That night I preached to another mob within half a mile of a camp of rebel soldiers. As I went home I was fired at from behind a tree. I had been going to town three times a week for my mail.

COL. HENRY GLAZE

At the Age of 74

I was always surrounded by a mob. Two full companies had already gone into the rebel army, and one man had gone into the Union army. But my most serious trouble was to come. I had frequently been warned not to go to town, but I continued to go. One day I had left my horse and buggy and gone to the postoffice. A stranger wanted me to walk out with him the back way, but I refused. He told me that between me and my horse a mob had collected and that I would be killed if I attempted to go where he was. I went to my horse and saw nothing suspicious, but just as I reached him some one called my name behind me, and as I turned a shot was fired, just missing my head. The man who fired the shot was only a few paces from me. At his second effort the pistol failed to go off. By that time I had my pistol out and as I raised it, he jumped behind a board fence. I fired, but missed him and hit another man who was running up with a pistol in his hand. He ran away. The man who was firing at me was on the ground behind the fence. I was standing on the street firing through the fence, at the first man who emptied his pistol at me. The second shot struck me in the side. I was not much hurt and continued firing until his pistol was exhausted. I had one shot still left. He called out for the crowd to go for me and a large number of men, who were concealed in a barn across the street rushed out. I backed a few steps to the fence and holding my pistol, kept them at bay. Finally a deputy sheriff rushed up and demanded my pistol. I told him that others had pistols and that I had been attacked first, and to have the others put up their pistols. He did so, and I let the hammer down on the cap of my only remaining load. Instantly I was attacked by a man with a half of a brick in his hand. I jerked out my pistol and warded off the brick, and at the same time my hand with the pistol was seized by the sheriff and my pistol wrenched from my hand and snapped in my face. I knocked the man down who had struck at me with a brick; and just then an old school mate rushed up with a pistol in his hand, demanding that they let me alone. The crowd scattered, and, thinking the trouble was over, I commenced to untie my horse, when a man ran up and struck me on the head with his pistol, knocking me down. I sprang to my feet and as two men were attacking me, knocked one down and the other one ran away. My skull was fractured by the blow of the pistol and blood ran down to my feet. Just then my friend returned and everybody ran away. My friend finding I was struck by one of the bullets, called a doctor, who pronounced me badly hurt. Two other doctors came and finally cut out the pistol ball.

"I then got in my buggy and drove out home.

"The doctors had only covered the cut where they took the bullet out with court plaster, and by the time I got home the blood had soaked it loose. My wife took three stitches in the wound and sewed it up.

"I was not seriously disabled and continued to go to town every other day. The governor of the state heard of it, and sent an officer down to notify them, that if I was further interrupted he would send soldiers to clean up the place. Soon after, Gen. John A. Logan, who lived there, but was in Washington in Congress, came back and concluded to stand by the government. His stand changed the sentiment of the people, although they, including his friends and relatives had all been against the government. I was attacked once afterwards by a man with a knife, but as a rule I was let alone. When my year was up, my next appointment was near my old home, and I shortly went into the army. I helped to raise a company and was assigned to the 63rd Illinois Infantry and commissioned captain. We were attached to the 3rd Brigade of the 3rd Division of the 17th Corps, Army of the Tennessee. Our own corps was commanded by General McPherson, and the Division by General John A. Logan. We were engaged in the capture of Fort Henry, with 4000 prisoners, the capture of Fort Donelson with 9000 prisoners, the siege and capture of Vicksburg and afterwards joined the Army of the Cumberland. After the battle of Chickamauga, the Regiment also took part in the Atlanta campaign and went with General Sherman to the Sea, and were at Washington in the great parade after the war was over.

"I had been promoted to Major and Lieut. Colonel and commanded the Regiment for a long time. After the war I went to Colorado and was twice commissioned Captain and once Major by the governor in campaigns against Indians. Afterward I went to Texas and occupied the position of deputy collector in the revenue department. For twenty years have been a resident of California. For several years I was in the employ of the state. For five years I have lived in San Francisco, was present at the great earthquake and fire, when my house and all my goods were burned up. I have five sons and one daughter, all married."

Col. Richard Brown, son of George and Nancy Stevenson Brown, was born in 1740, he married the widow of one William M. Holmes, (Honor Wells Holmes.) To them were given three children: Rachel, Richard and Margaret. Col. Richard Brown was at first a captain in 1st Battalion of Col. Miles' Regiment, Penn. Rifles, recruited in Bedford County, Penn., April 15th, 1776. See Record Penn. Library, Book One, Second Series, Penn. Archives. His wife's first husband was one William M. Holmes, who was also an Englishman and came to America about 1720, as did James Wells. He married Honor Wells, daughter of said James Wells, and to this first marriage of Honor Wells Holmes Brown were given Leonorah, William, James, Sarah, Elizabeth, Thomas and Alexander. Holmes died in 1758, and then she married Col. Richard Brown as aforesaid. How long he was in the war for Independence is not known. After the war he settled at Holliday's Cove, Brook County, West Va., and died in 1811, March 28th. The Browns were all members of the Episcopal church.

Nancy Brown, daughter of George and Nancy Stevenson Brown, married Richard Wells, the third son of James Wells, the Englishman, and was therefore a sister-in-law to her brother, Col. Richard Brown. To this union were given: Richard, Jr., Alexander, George, Mary, General James, who was a general in the Revolutionary War; Patience, Thomas, John and two other girls whose names are lost.

George, son of Richard and Nancy Brown Wells, moved to Licking County, Ohio, about the year 1802, and settled in Union Township, a half mile north of Luray. He married Elizabeth Holmes, daughter of William and Honor (Wells) (Holmes) Brown. On their farm was built the first Methodist Episcopal church in Union Township, Licking County, Ohio, which was built in 1813, and was known as George's Chapel. It was replaced with a brick church in 1833. To this union were given: Joseph, George, Richard, Elizabeth, Honor and Nancy.

Elizabeth Wells, daughter of aforesaid George and Elizabeth Holmes Wells, married James Holmes, Jr.

On this George Wells farm is located a cemetery, also known as George's Chapel cemetery. In this cemetery repose the mortal remains of George Wells and wife, his brother-in-law, Capt. James Holmes, Sr., and wife, Thomas Holmes and wife, George Wells, Jr., and wife; also James Holmes Jr. and his daughter lie in a vault nearby. George Wells, Sr., with his brothers and sisters were first cousins of the family of Edward Brown, son of George Brown; also General James Wells, brother of George Wells, Sr., married Rachel Brown, daughter of Col. Richard Brown. In this connection I wish to refer to the history of the Wells family as written by Miss M. J. Roe. She states that Capt. Oliver Brown, one of the Boston Tea Party, was one of Joshua Brown's sons of the George and Nancy Stevenson Brown family. The records fully establish the fact that the Browns, Wells and Holmes families were thorough-blooded patriots in the war for Independence.

The others located on the south side of Buckeye Lake, east of Millersport in Fairfield County, Ohio. About the year 1814, Nicholas Brown moved to this locality from Kentucky. ## The Comly Family Henry and Joan Comly, with their son Henry, came to Pennsylvania with William Penn in 1682. A family tradition says that Henry Comly had a brother Walter in England, who possessed a valuable estate, but had no children. It is also said that a person by the name of John Comly came to Pennsylvania from Bristol, England, and that he was a soldier in Braddock's army, but we have no further account of him. We therefore conclude that Henry and Joan Comly were the first of that name who came to America, and that all of the now very extended family of Comlys are descendants from them. They came from Bedminster, near Bristol, England, and were members of the Society of Friends. Persons by the name of Comly are frequently mentioned in the history of the persecutions of Friends in England, as having suffered imprisonment "for attending religious meetings and refusing to swear." Henry Comly was a weaver by trade, and settled in Warminster, Bucks County, on a tract of 500 acres. In the records of Middletown Meeting, then called "Neshaminah," we find that "Henry Comly was buried ye 14th day of ye 3d mo., 1684." On the 2d day of the 12th mo. of the same year, 1684, at a Monthly Meeting of Friends of Tacony and Poetquessink, held at John Hart's house, Joseph English requested a certificate to take Joan Comly, of the County of Bucks, and John Hart was ordered to write and sign it on behalf of the Meeting."

Joseph and Joan, after having published their intentions of marriage at two successive meetings, "held at Neshaminah Creek, and none appearing to object," were married "at a Public meeting held at John Otter's, in the presence of twelve witnesses, one of them being a Justice of the Peace," on the 26th day of ye 2d mo., 1685. The witnesses were Mary Eastman, John Otter, Edward Bennit, Robert Hall, John Boyden, Margaret Boyden, Naomi Allen, Henry English, James Spencer, Elizabeth Otter, Rebekah Bennet, John Hust, Elizabeth Lundy, and Robert Rowe.

Joseph English died Aug. 10, 1686, and his widow, Joan, "was buried at the meeting-house at Neshaminah. Oct. 20, 1689." Thus we find that within seven years after the arrival of this family in Pennsylvania, the father, mother, and step-father of young Henry died, so that Friends were concerned "to extend to him, while yet in his minority, their care and assistance."

Henry, son of Henry and Joan Comly, married Agnes, daughter of Robert and Alice Heaton, Aug. 17, 1695. Agnes was born Dec. 9th, 1677.

The following is a copy of their marriage certificate:

"Whereas, Henry Comly and Agnes Heaton, both of ye County of Bucks and Province of Pennsylvania, having declared their intentions to taking each other as husband and wife before several publick meetings of ye people of God, called Quakers, according to ye good order used among them; whose proceedings therein, after deliberate consideration thereof, and consent of parties and relations concerned being approved by ye said meetings, and publication thereof having been made according to ye law of this province;

"Now, these are to certifie all whom it may concern yt for ye full determination of their said intentions, this seventeenth day of ye eighth month, in ye year one thousand six hundred and ninety and five, they ye said Henry Comly and Agnes Heaton, appeared in a publick and solemn assemblie of ye aforesaid people at ye publick meeting-house of Friends in Middletown, near Neshaminah, in ye county and province aforesaid, met together for that end and purpose, according to the example of ye holy men of God recorded in ye Scriptures of Truth—he, the said Henry Comly, taking ye said Agnes Heaton by ye hand, did openly declare as follows: 'Friends, in ye presence of ye Lord I desire you to bear me witness, I take Agnes Heaton to be my wife, promising to be to her a loving and faithful husband till it please ye Lord by death to separate us.' And then and there in ye said assemblie, ye said Agnes Heaton did, in like manner, declare as followeth: 'Friends, in ye presence of ye Lerd, and before you his people, I take my friend Henry Comly to be my husband, promising to be a loving and faithful wife till ye Lord by death do separate us.'

"And ye said Henry Comly and Agnes, now his wife, as a further confirmation thereof, did then and there to these presents set their hands.

"HENRY COMLY.

"AGNES COMLY.

"And we, whose names are herunto subscribed as witnesses thereto, have also to these P'snts subscribed our hands ye day and year above written:

"Robert (X) Heaton, Sr.,	Will Hayhurst,

On the 11th of September, 1697, Robert Heaton deeded 300 acres of his estate in the Manor of Moreland to his son-in-law, Henry Comly, for the consideration of £72 15s. This place was called Green Brier Spring, and became the residence of Henry Comly, in whose family it has since continued.

In the old family Bible brought from England by the first Henry Comly, and now in the possession of Willet A. Comly, we find the following record of the children of Henry and Agnes Comly; Mary Comly, born Dec. 12th, 1699; Henry Comly, born Feb. 26th, 1702; Robert Comly, born April 12th, 1704; John Comly, born March 20th, 1706; Joseph Comly, born August 8, 1708; Walter Comly, born November 12, 1710; Agnes Comly, born February 20, 1713; James Comly, born June 14, 1715; Isaac Comly, born June 4, 1717; Grace Comly, born Jan. 24, 1721.

Henry Comly was very active both in civil and religious matters, and his name frequently appears on the records of the Meeting and in the civil affairs of the neighborhood. He died 1st mo. (March) 16th, 1727, aged 53 years. His will was dated March (1st mo.) 13th, 1727, and by it he gave his farm of 292 acres in Warminster to his sons Robert and James. The Moreland estate was divided among Henry, Joseph and Walter, and the farm adjoining, now owned by Benjamin Tomlinson, was left to John. His personal property was appraised 2d mo. 13th, 1727, by Bartholomew Longstreet and Joseph Gilbert, and in it we find the following items: "A negro girl, £20; a negro boy, £30."

Agnes (Heaton) Comly was "a woman of small stature, possessed of a good stock of common sense, and quite active even in advanced life, so that she could perform the duties of her household or ride on horseback with nearly as much ease as in her youthful days." She died 10th mo. (December) 30th, 1743, aged 66 years. Her will is dated 20th of December (10th mo.), 1743. In the appraisement of her property we find: "One negro, Phillis, £28; a negro boy, Wallis, £14."

DESCENDANTS OF JOSEPH, SON OF HENRY AND AGNES COMLY.

Joseph Comly, was born 8th mo. 8th, 1708. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Benjamin Mason, and settled in Moreland, on a farm lately owned by Judge Sommer, about 1730. He was remarkably healthy and was never sick except it was for a few days previous to his death. He was very fond of strong drink, and frequently drank a quart of rum at one time without becoming intoxicated. This he always called "sma'l beer." He wore stockings without any feet, and went without a coat or upper jacket in winter time. He removed to Gunpowder, Md., and not asking for a certificate from Byberry Monthly Meeting, of which he was a member, they, in 1759, sent one after him. Previous to this time he had sold his farm, and in old age owned no property. In 1774, he went to Joshua Comly's house apparently in good health, but said that he was come to die in his old lodging-room over the kitchen. Shortly afterward he was taken sick, and died in about four weeks from the time of his arrival there, at the age of sixty-six years. During his illness his mind was composed, and he had no fear of death. He said he never swore an oath in his life, never wronged any many out of a penny, and never told a falsehood to the injury of any person. Some who were well acquainted with him said they had no reason to doubt his assertions. How many who have made far greater pretensions towards possessing religion than he, could with truth adopt the language of Joseph Comly? He was very strong: could put a barrel of cider in a wagon with ease, and take one that was full on his knees and drink out of the bung. His vocal powers were astonishing. On one occasion some of his family started to go to market in the night, but after they had gone some time the old man recollected he had forgotten to send for a keg of nails by them; he, therefore, called to them and mentioned what he wanted. They heard him, although three miles off, and attended to his request. When going to visit his relations, he would, when within about two miles, call to them, that they might know he was coming. He was a great walker, and always went to Gunpowder on foot, which he called an evening's walk. When making the journey he carried his bread, cheese, and a bottle of rum, and ate, drank, and slept by the roadside. His wife died about 1757, and he died 6th mo. 21, 1774, aged 66 years.

DESCENDANTS OF ISAAC, SON OF HENRY AND AGNES COMLY.

Isaac Comly, was born in Moreland, in 1717. He married Abigail, daughter of Thomas Walmsley, 2d mo., 1738, and settled in the village of Smithfield. He lived in a hip-roofed house, which had, on a stone in the wall near the door, the inscription, "I. C., 1744." This house was removed only a few years since, having stood nearly one hundred years. They afterward moved to a place near the present residence of Silas Vanarsdalen, where Isaac died, in 1748, aged thirty-three years. He was a blacksmith by trade, and followed that business through life. His children were: Agnes, Isaac, born 1741, and died in 1743; Isaac, and William. Abigail, his widow, married Richard Walton, in 1753. Children: Joseph, born in 1754, and Esther, born in 1755.

ISAAC AND ABIGAIL COMLY'S CHILDREN.

Agnes, born 11th mo. 2d, 1738, married John Duncan, in 1759. He died 10th mo. 6th, 1772, aged 51 years. Children: Abigail, Rachel, Esther, and Phebe. In 1793, Agnes married Andrew Singley, of White Sheet Bay, on the Delaware. He died in 1814, aged 72 years; and Agnes died in 1821, aged 83 years.

Isaac, was born at Smithfield, 9th mo. 25th, 1743. When about five years old he lost his father. After this event he and his mother went to live with her father on the farm lately owned by Charles Walmsley. In 1753, his mother married Richard Walton, and he resided in that family until 1771, when he married Asenath, daughter of John and Ann Hampton, of Wrightstown. They took a farm in the western part of Byberry, where they resided two years, after which they purchased of Thomas Knight a farm of about one hundred and forty acres, near the centre of Byberry, where they permanently settled. By a regular course of industry and economy, Isaac and Asenath Comly accumulated considerable property and brought up a large family of children, most of whom have since figured conspicuously in the affairs of the township of Byberry. Isaac Comly was not ambitious of fame, and never sought after popularity, his object being to attend to his own business, leaving to others the cares and responsibilities of public life. He was a member of the religious Society of Friends, and always bore an unexceptionable character among them. His wife was an Elder in the Meeting, and was much respected. Their children were Martha, John, Joseph, Isaac, Ezra, Ethan, and Jason. He died 8th mo. 3d, 1822, aged seventy-nine; and his wife 3 mo. 3d, 1826, aged seventy-seven years.

ISAAC AND ASENATH COMLY'S CHILDREN.

Martha, born 12th mo. 29th, 1771, married Evan T. Knight. They lived in Bensalem, where he died 2d mo. 6th, 1841; and she died 7th mo. 29th, 1851. Children: Isaac and Phebe.

John, was born in Byberry, 11th mo. 19th, 1773. He was carefully brought up according to the rules of the Society of Friends, and at an early age, while yet a school-boy, manifested a great interest in the Society, and exhibited those traits of humility and tenderness which so eminently characterized him through life. In 1792 he was placed under Samuel Jones, the Baptist minister at Pennypaek, to study the Latin and Greek languages, where he remained until the spring of 1794. He then engaged as a teacher in Byberry School, where he continued until 1801, when he resigned, and from a sense of duty engaged as a teacher in Westtown Boarding School. In 1802 he resigned that situation and returned to his native place, and in the following spring again took charge of Byberry School. In 6th mo. 1803, he married Rebecca, daughter of Dr. Stacy Budd, of Mount Holly, N. J., and settled on a farm lately purchased in Byberry. In 1804 he opened a boarding-school for girls at his residence, which was successfully continued until 1810, and was then changed into a school for boys and young men, and continued till 1815. His literary works are as follows: "English Grammar," published in 1803; "Spelling Book," in 1806; "Primer," in 1807; and "Reader and Book of Useful Knowledge," in 1840. Some of these have passed through several editions, and still have an extensive sale throughout the whole country. He was also the author of several essays upon moral subjects, which were published in the journals of that day. He was subsequently engaged, along with his brother Isaac, in publishing a periodical called "Friends' Miscellany," which was continued through a series of years, and has been the means of preserving many valuable records, biographical sketches, historical notes, and other matters of peculiar interest. John Comly appeared as a minister in the Society of Friends in 1810; and his labors being approved by the Monthly Meeting, he was recommended in 1813. Besides his services at home, he frequently made religious visits, which extended to New England, New York, Ohio, Maryland, and other places, and which tended greatly to inculcate the peaceable principles of Friends. Several of his sermons were stenographically reported by Marcus T. Gould, and afterward published. He was also eminently useful as a surveyor, and was often able to satisfactorily settle conflicting claims and disputes among his neighbors. He died at his residence in By-berry, 8th mo. 17th, 1850, after an illness of only a few hours, aged nearly 77 years. His wife died 8th mo. 9th, 1832.

Their children were Stacy, Ann, Charles, Sarah, and Emmor.

Joseph, was born in Byberry, 12th mo. 16th, 1775. He learned the trade of a carpenter, which business he followed for several years, and afterward settled on a part of his father's farm. In 1800 he built a commodious house, the one now occupied by his son, Watson Comly; and in the latter part of the same year was married to Abigail, daughter of Jonathan Parry. She died in 1805. Children: Asenath, Phebe, and James. In 1807 he married Rachel, daughter of Dr. John Watson, of Buckingham. He had a taste for mechanical pursuits, and was the first to introduce several important improvements, in those matters, into townships. He became quite noted for moving buildings, such as houses, barns, etc.; and, from a record kept by him, he moved one hundred and sixty-five buildings in the course of twenty years. He published several essays in the Evening Fireside and other periodicals, wrote several journal's of his travels, and collected considerable historical matter of local interest. He was a very useful man, and highly respected by all who knew him. He died in Byberry, 2d mo. 5th, 1854, aged 78 years. His wife, Rachel, died 2d mo. 3d, 1839.

Isaac, born in Byberry, 3d mo. 21st, 1779. He was apt at learning while a youth; and, without any other advantages than those afforded by the neighboring school, fitted himself for the duties of a teacher. In 1794 he commenced as an usher under his brother John, at Byberry, and in 1797 engaged as an assistant with Samuel Comfort, of Middletown. He remained here until 3d mo., 1798, when he took charge of the school at Buckingham for one year. He removed to Horsham in 1799, and in the latter part of the same year to Ancocas, New Jersey, where he continued teaching school for two years. During part of 1801 he taught at Mansfield's Neck; and in 1802 took a school at Newton, New Jersey, where he remained until 1809, when he relinquished the business. He then spent some time in traveling; and in 1811 was married to Meribah, daughter of John and Rebecca Barton, of Newton, New Jersey. Soon after his marriage he opened a store in Byberry, which was continued until about 1822, when he moved to the old homestead, where he spent the remainder of his life in tilling the soil. He was a clerk at Byberry Monthly Meeting for many years, and afterward an Elder. As a writer, he ranks second to none who has ever resided in the townships, his information extending to nearly every branch of literature; and his numerous essays, prose and poetical, which were published in several of the best periodicals of the day, and which were extensively copied, exhibit a talent of no ordinary merit. Among those articles we notice many sketches of these townships, and it is to Isaac Comly that we are indebted for much of the present history. Besides these fugitive pieces, he published a reading book for schools, entitled "Easy Lessons for Juvenile Readers," in 1807; the "Philadelphia Primer," in 1808; "A New Assistant," in 1809, and was one of the editors of the "Friends' Miscellany." His great delight, however, seems to have been among the musty records of bygone times; and to hunt up and note down every particular relative to family and local history was one of the chief employments of his life. He collected much toward a history of his native and surrounding townships, and traced out the genealogy of many of the most prominent families who have resided in the vicinity. He was frequently applied to by those wishing information of this kind, and they were seldom disappointed. Being of an amiable disposition, and just in his dealings, he was honored and respected by all who knew him. The even tenor of his life was rarely disturbed by surrounding circumstances, and he passed through the scenes of this world in peace and contentment. He died at his farm in Byberry, 10th mo. 19th, 1847, aged 68 years. His widow died 11th mo. 8th, 1862. Children: Mary and Robert.

Ezra, born in Byberry, 9th mo. 3d, 1781. He married Sarah Strickland, in 1804. He resided in Byberry for several years, after which he moved to Plack River, in the northern part of New York. In 18— he returned to Byberry, where he spent the rest of his life. He died 8th mo. 27th, 1863; and Sarah died 1st mo. 17th, 1855. Children: Elizabeth and Isaac.

Ethan, born 5th mo. 31st, 1784, remained in Byberry until 1804, when he removed to Philadelphia and became a merchant. He wrote several excellent miscellaneous articles for the public papers. In account of an affection of the spine, he was induced to cultivate his taste for drawing, so that he acquired very great skill and proficiency in that art. He was a member of the Academy of Fine Arts in Philadelphia, and was much respected by all who knew him. He died 6th mo. 13th, 1865. Children: Allen, Eliza, and Henry.

He moved with his family, on horseback, to Burgetstown, Washington County, Penn., where his wife, Hannah, died in 1810, and was buried at the burying ground near Burgetstown. Edith Comly, daughter of John and Hannah Vaughn Comly, was born at Burgetstown, Penn., Nov. 15th, 1801. She married Elijah Lacey, of Niles, Michigan, and resided there last known.

Sarah Comly, daughter of John and Hannah Vaughn Comly, was born Jan. 14th, 1784, near Burgetstown, Penn. She was married to William W. Gault. Date of marriage is lost, but was not far from 1802. To them were given nine children: John C., Hannah, William Jr., Mary, Sarah, Eliza, Emeline, James C., and Caroline D. Gault. Soon after their marriage they moved to Newark, Licking County, Ohio. Newark was then a small village, and he was one of the first settlers. He was familiarly known as Col. Gault, being colonel of State Troops. He was prominent in public life, represented his county in the State Legislature several times, was sheriff of the county and warden of the Ohio Penitentiary several years. He was a leading spirit in Masonic lodge; also in I. O. O. F. During the last years of his life he lived on his farm near Hebron, Ohio, and died in 1847. His wife, Sarah Comly Gault, died in 1855, at Shadeville, Franklin County, Ohio, at the home of her daughter, Mary West.

Mary Gault married John F. West, March 15, 1842. There are two of this family living: Mrs. Eliza G. Moneypenny and Sadie L. West, who reside at 1284 Highland St., Columbus, Ohio. John F. He married a second wife in June, 1866. He died in September, 1866, and was buried beside his first wife in the Friends' burying ground at Mt. Pleasant, Ohio. His second wife, Mary Whinnery, a cousin of his first wife by marriage, died Sept. 1881, and was also buried beside his first wife at Mt. Pleasant cemetery.

At the death of David Comly, Sr., his farm was given to his son, David, Jr. David sold the farm to his brother Benjamin, and it is still owned by the Comly heirs and has been in the Comly family one hundred years. David Comly, Sr., was the last one of his family to pass over into the great unknown. He lived a true Friend or Quaker. I don't think that the younger descendants are as loyal to that church as the older ones were. Many have joined the churches in whose environment they live, which no doubt is proper and right.

John W. Comly, M. D., son of David and Sarah Whinnery Comly, was born near Smithfield, Jefferson County, Ohio, and was married to Mary C. Armstrong. To them were given three children: Sarah J., William and Marietta Comly.

Sarah J. Comly married Dr. N. R. Coleman, who died several years since. She resides at 264 East Town street, Columbus, Ohio.

John W. Comly, the oldest of the family, was a man college bred and an eminent physician. He practiced his profession at Harrisville, Harrison County, Ohio. Located there in 1849, and spent all his years of active practice there. During the dark days of 1861-'65, he voluntarily gave his services to his government in assisting in the care of the sick and wounded and of the prisoners of war which were being crowded into the hospitals in and about Washington, D. C., which service was gratefully received and appreciated. The last fifteen years of his life he spent his winters in the South to escape the changes of season. He died Feb. 1895, and was buried at Green Lawn Cemetery, Columbus, Ohio. His brothers and sisters have all passed over to the great unknown, and their families are scattered and building up families and homes elsewhere.

James Comly, son of John and Hannah Vaughn Comly, was born October 5th, 1779, near Burgetstown, Washington County, Penn. Katherine Whitaker was born March 2, 1782, near Burgetstown, Penn. They were married March 1st, 1801. To them were given nine children, who grew to mature years: John, Bazaleel W., Hannah, James, Joshua, David, Elizabeth, Catherine and Sarah Ann.

James Comly and his wife lived at Burgetstown, Penn., for a short time, and then moved to Smithfield, Jefferson County, Ohio, in 1804, where they resided until the year 1809, when they migrated to or near Circleville, Ohio, where they resided until the year 1815, when they moved to Perry County, Ohio, and he laid out the town of New Lexington in 1816. He was a man of great energy and ability, and did much toward the betterment of his pioneer neighbors, but died in the prime of life in 1827, aged 47 years, from an attack of gastritis. His widow died at New Lexington, Ohio, in her 89th year. She was a remarkable woman of the pioneer type, was fearless in the presence of danger, was a good marksman, having shot wild cats and deer when they ventured near to the cabin. She was accustomed to the howl of wolves and other wild animals of pioneer times, was noted as a nurse in sickness; using the home remedies herbs and various roots, etc., with which she was quite successful in doing much good to the sick. She was a devout Christian, and was a member of the first Methodist class formed at New Lexington, Ohio, her son-in-law, Asa Brown, being the class leader. She devoted her life to good works as she had opportunity, caring for orphan children and other needy persons. Full of years and good works, as a ripe shock of corn in its season, she was gathered to the garner above.

John Comly, son of James and Catherine Whitaker Comly, was born Jan. 18th, 1803, at Smithfield, Jefferson County, Ohio, and was married to Susan McClung of New Lexington, Ohio. He was a prominent man and well beloved by those who knew him. He held the position of Colonel of the state troops at the time of his death, April 11, 1840, aged 37 years. To them was born one child, Susan. Soon after her birth her mother died, and a few months later her father also passed away from a violent attack of inflammation of the bowels. Susan grew to mature years and married Samuel Yeomans an attorney, who became Colonel of the 90th Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry. He died leaving his widow without children. She is now a very old lady, and resides at Washington C. H., Ohio.

Stuart, at New Lexington, Ohio, Oct. 25th, 1827. His wife Margaret J. Stuart, was born March 8th, 1810, and died at Oblong, Ill., Sept. 9th, 1880. To this union were given 12 children, nine of whom lived to old age: Sarah M., James M., Katherine J., Mary E., Robert S., Hannah E., Lucy A., Carrie B. and Adda R. Comly.

Sickness forced him to leave the service for several months. Near the close of war he was appointed colonel, which office he filled at the close of war. ### GENERAL JAMES M. COMLY.

“Knowing General Comly intimately more than twenty-five years and especially having lived by his side, day and night during almost the whole of the war, it would be strange indeed if I did not deem it a privilege and a labor of love to unite with his comrades in strewing flowers on the grave of one whose talents and achievements were so ample and so admirable and whose life and character was rounded to a completeness rarely found among the best and most gifted of men.”—Rutherford B. Hayes.

In writing the foregoing, President Hayes paid a just tribute to the memory of James M. Comly.

That his many relatives and friends who may chance to peruse this record may know the type of man he was, I will very briefly give an outline of his life. When a mere boy he left his home at New Lexington, Ohio, and went to Columbus, Ohio, and learned the printing business with his uncle, Robert Stuart, at the same time educating himself in the public schools of Columbus. While following journalism, he also studied law with Attorney General Walcott, and in 1859 was admitted to the bar of the supreme court of Ohio, being sworn in open court by Chief Justice Joseph Swan. In 1861 he entered the service of the United States as a private soldier, and was elected lieutenant by his company. Soon after, Aug. 12, 1861, he was appointed Lieut. Col. of the 43rd Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, but became anxious for active service and accepted the rank of Major in the 23rd Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry. He was with his regiment in every battle until the close of the war and was in command in every battle, his superior officers being in detail in other regiments. He was promoted to Colonel and was brevetted Brigadier General at the close of the war. In October, 1865, he became editor of the Ohio State Journal. In 1870 President Grant appointed him postmaster at Columbus, Ohio, and in 1877 President Hayes appointed him minister to the Hawaiian Islands. In all these trusts he was a master hand and did honor to the confidence reposed in him.

He returned to the field of journalism in 1882, but was broken in health, and died at Toledo, Ohio, July 26, 1887. He was of that high class of men who never consent to do injustice or act deceitfully. Bright as were his professional talents, his military record and his official services were equally so, and they were as nothing beside his character as a man. He was charitable in his judgments, and kindly in his disposition to all. He was preeminently a Christian gentleman, and wrote many beautiful poems, among which may be found some fine Christian sentiments, revealing a profound love of God and an ever-abiding faith in his goodness.

I.

If all the Heavens were rolled together as a scroll,
And all the earth were sunless, starless, desolate and void,
With empty waters poured around a dreary waste of land,
Whose vacant, bare, primeval rocks threw back
Upon the desert atmosphere no sound,
Save dismal, lonely moanings from the solemn sea,—
Yet, would earth, atmosphere and sea,
Prove by the solid rocks and winds and waves
There must be God.

II.

Whence came this Earth, this atmosphere and sea?
By natural law? Whence came the law?
Where there is natural law, there must be God.
How can there be a law without a Power Supreme Ordaining it? Is law a thing of chance?
Then is it no law, but imbecile unguided drifting.
Hither, thither, and yon.

III.

Oh, puny man!

Oh, midge of Time upon the ocean of Eternity—
A microscopic parasite upon this lump of Earth,
Which lies, the lightest sand upon the shoreless sea of space,
Thou darest to say, There is no God, but only evolution,
Natural law or chance! Who ordained the law,
Developed man, and ruled the accidents of Chance?
Who guided evolution through formless void and chaos
In the unpeopled, awful silence of that darkness on the deep?
Who hung this little dog-cage earth so subtly
On the verge between centripetal-centrifugal,
That one small pebble, by an urchin tossed
From shore to sea, might shift the centre of the Universe's gravity. Who taught this earth-clod,
Through aeons of whirling ages to thread its way
Among the myriad worlds up-shining in the sky,
In all the vast infinity of space appalling?
Who held the hissing molten mass thrown into space,
And crushed its heaving hell-billows into shape;
Lighted up the darkness on the face of the deep,
And shaped the awful desolate, formless void
For monstrous fish-and-lizard shapes primeval?
What brainless, soulless vis viva or vitalis
Prepared this circling globe to be the home of MAN?
